Nation's Defense Dwindles List Of Volunteers

About 65 young men volunteer blood donors have left Branford during the past few weeks for a year's service in the interest of national defense. This leaves the list of Branford donors depleted and it may be necessary to ask for additional volunteers who are available, without remuneration. Scarcely a week goes by without a call for this service and sometimes there comes three or four demands, weekly. Until now, when a doctor asks for donors, Joseph Driscoll, who receives the calls, gets busy on the phone and in a short time someone is on the way to the hospital to give his blood to save the life of a fellowman. Typing of blood is necessary before transfusion but Mr. Driscoll will make these appointments for anyone interested. The subject of transfusions has been given international attention since the beginning of the war, and in a recent issue of the Rotarian, Norman Sommerville writes "That blood can be transferred from one living creature to another has been known just about as long as the fact that blood circulates in the body—ever since the 17th Century. But just as the mixing of the blood of different species, such as oxen and human, usually was fatal, so many transfusions from man to man often caused the death of the receiver. Constant research disclosed, between 1907 and 1910 that the tiny red flakes that color the blood, the corpuscles, were the cause. There are four main types, and they disagree with each other, causing clots in some cases within the veins or arteries. Blood of the same type can be most safely used, and therefore "typing" of blood is necessary before transfusion. Hospitalists hit upon the plan of typing the blood of healthy persons who stood ready for calls at any time. Rotarians were, of course, among those responding. Offering to supply the often desperately needed pint of blood gratis if patients were unable to pay the usual price—which ranges from $25 to $50."

Obscurity Envelopes Origin Of Name

Ine, King of Wessex, Transacted Business of State in Brentford, England, 705—Edmund Ironside and Canute Battled There Earliest records, that is until the thirteenth century, refer to Brentford as Brantford. During the reign of Queen Elizabeth it was designated Braynebourthe and Breyntford. By 1700 it had been known as Brantford, Brantford, Branford and Brentford. There are several theories concerning the origin of the word as it now appears. In as much as we presume Branford, Conn. was named after the English town, we are interested in the origin. Discovery of antiquities of the Roman period indicate that those conquerors made a temporary visitation to Brentford but there are no documentary evidences to prove that any Roman building existed in the namesake town. Exhaustive researches by Sir Montagu Sharpe lead archaeologists to feel confident that this is the locality where, in 54 b.c. Julius Caesar and his Roman Legions crossed the Thames. There is little evidence to determine the origin of the town's name but Fred Turner in his book "Brentford" published in London in 1898 has this to say: "The latter half of the word presents no difficulty..... It is in short, the Anglo-Saxon word for a shallow stream which may be crossed without swimming, and is usually affixed to the name of such a stream or river. The first half of the word is "thorn in the side of many antiquaries." The old meaning of the word Brent was "steep or high." It is probable, says Turner, that "the river Brent takes its name from the fact that it has as its source the most hilly locality in Middlesex. At least six others English towns, glory in the name of Brent. Several of these grace high elevations but interestingly enough are completely isolated from the stream by that name. It is likely then that the word an argument of itself."

Traffic Normal As Snow Storm Comes To Halt

Hazardous driving and walking conditions of the past several days were lessened this morning when the sun appeared in all its glory after several days of practically steady snow. Mountainous banks of snow edged the roads and paths but slightly warmer temperatures are melting the heaps rapidly and clogged highways are quite passable. The worst storm since 1935 snarled traffic, causing cars to be left stalled in dangerous places. Selectman Gordon Bradley soon brought traffic back to normal and the State Highway Department cleared the main roads in quick order. Parked automobiles delayed progress and it looked as if the town was to experience a taste of the Blizzard of '88 so rapidly did the flakes "make." The storm has abated the sun is out, but the slush will remain for days.

Out-Dated Ideas Cause Of Indian Loss To Survive

When the white man first set foot on our shores he was beset with many perils, not the least of which were the resentful Indians. Many a Pilgrim chest was pierced by an arrow winging its way apparently out of nowhere and many a skull was split by an unseen tomahawk. Yet the white race survived to dominate in America. Why? Because the white man recognized danger and strove to meet it. He learned to walk with the stealth of his red brother, to avoid open spaces in the forest, to sharpen his senses, to move quickly and surely. Then he taught these precautions to his children. And the red man, lacking his initiative, all but vanished from the face of the earth.

Something of this Pilgrim spirit and fortitude is needed among pedestrians today. All around them are dangers, far from insurmountable, but pedestrians heed them not. Instead, they cling to the out-dated idea that they can use the streets when and how they please, disregarding the fact that their ranks are thinned by many thousands every year. Is the pedestrian to become "the vanishing American"?

The following, published by the Travelers Insurance Co., shows the accident experience of pedestrians in 1940. It points out the danger areas and the dangerous practices which led to this slaughter. It calls for close scrutiny by those who would survive amidst modern dangers brought about by the automobile. To ignore these warnings is to court disaster.

Actions of Pedestrians Resulting in Deaths—crossing at intersection; with signal, 190; against signal, 746; no signal, 2,150; diagonally, 210.

IN THE GOOD OLD DAYS

Were they the "good" old days? Perhaps so, but they were days of physical toil, particularly in household tasks, that took a heavy toll in ill health and shortened lives. Census figures show 35% more persons 65 years or older in 1940 than in 1930—a tribute to progress in medical science and betterment in our "way of life".

How much electricity and its elimination of drudgeries has had to do with this happy result, no one knows, but it is enough to call these the good new days — electrical days.

YOU DON'T NEED us to tell you what a whole of a car the Pontiac "Torpedo" is. The new Pontiac speaks for itself—and it tells you clearly that a smarter, roomier, sweeter-riding car will be hard to find. The only time this Pontiac needs our help is when somebody says, "It's too high-priced for me." That's when we go to work and here we are.

With all of its size, its beauty, its "expensive" look, Pontiac's prices are so close to the "lowest-priced three" that the difference is only a few dollars per month.

Locals Lose To Manchester Tr.

A Branford double burst last Monday night at the New Haven Arena when Manchester Trade soundly trounced the local Hornets at the finals of the class B, C. I. A. C. basketball tournament. The final score was 49 to 34. In the second game Bristol High was likewise edged out 25 to 24 in their quest for the "A" title.

It was a nervous and jittery Branford array which collapsed in the opening period before the furious onslaught of Los Kratavich and company, who managed to roll up 12 points before the bewildered locals could score.

The Traders led at the quarter by a 21 to 4 count but the Hornets paced by the finest schoolboy basketball in the state Petela commenced to find the range to bring the score to 27-14 at the half.

For a while at the start of the second half it appeared as if the Branfordites would finally get going as they staged an opening third period rush but Manchester again put on the pressure to lead the Hornets at the three quarter mark 39-22.

Branford completely collapsed in the final canto and the Manchester Traders again started swishing the nets to end the game by a fifteen point winning margin, 49 to 34.

Though the Knechtmen lost it remained for Stanley Petela to steal the show on Saturday night when he alone accounted for 22 points.

Hornets Defeat Plainville Five In Semi-Finals

Branford High gained the Class B finals last Thursday night at the Payne Whitney gym when they completely demolished Plainville and more particularly their star performer, "Corky" Corlette, while they cautiously plied up enough points to win 31 to 24.

The game was not played to the crowd's liking but the upstart, who for two years have set the 2 tournament on the edge of Corlette's court capers, were forced to slow down under the Hornets safety game. The Knechtmen made few mistakes and capitalized on those which Plainville made.

The credit for stopping Corlette rests entirely with Lipkovich, who for the second straight time completely stopped the opposition's ace threat. Last Tuesday it was Sweeney, who had previously gone wild against Derby in the playoffs, who was stopped by the blond boy's sensational defensive.

Southern Trip Scheduled For Wesleyan Nine

Spring sports schedules for Wesleyan University varsity teams were announced today by Athletic Director Harold S. Wood.

The varsity basketball team will make a southern trip prior to the opening of the regular season, meeting Randolph-Macon at Ashland, Va., on April 1; the University of Richmond at Richmond, Va., on April 2; Gettysburg College at Gettysburg, Pa., on April 4; and Rutgers at New Brunswick, N. J., on April 5.

The team opens its regular schedule on April 18 with a game here with Vermont and plays midway here on the following day. The remainder of the schedule follows:

April 23, University of Connecticut at Bowdoin, here; 30, Brown, here; May 3, Williams, here; 6, Trinity, away; 10, Amherst, away; 14, Yale, here; 21, Massachusetts, here; 24, Boston University, here; 27, Trinity, here; June 13, Amherst, here, and 14, Williams, away.

The track season starts with two indoor meets, on March 15, with Springfield College, here, and March 22, University of Connecticut a week later at Willamson. The Rhode Island at Kingston during an examination period in January by a score of 70-61 and to Villanova a week later at Willamson. The opponent's floor, the lack of practice during the exam period and the illness of several team members due to an influenza epidemic which was raging on the campus at that time, played havoc with the team.

to the Yale coaching staff, a year or so ago.

Hubert Sedgewick, the dean of Connecticut's Sportsman's Club, spoke of his long association with the Journal Courier's sport editor and then told briefly of the start of the Annex Club and the growth of sports in the past three decades.

FOR CANTEN FUND

Final word of acceptance late last night from all four teams, scheduled to appear in the Carnival of Champions at the Branford Armory on Monday night, gave positive assurance to the local sports fans that they are to see the premier contest in the state basketball history. Four champions, the Connecticut Huskies, the West Haven Red Devils, the Branford Battery II and the Branford High School Hornets will all appear in the huge benefit contest for the battery canteen fund.

Some seasons ago the West Haven Red Devils were seeking a name and a reputation. It was on a Thanksgiving night and they scheduled the Branford Tanks. The Tanks at that time were considered the finest team in the state. West Haven beat the Branford out that night and from there to unparalleled heights in the court game.

Three years later the Branford Alumni were seeking a name and they beat the Devils two out of three. Since that time Branford has never beaten the famed "Shooting Circus." The circus may be gone from the state boards next season, their inability to draw the crowds will force their abandonment of West Haven. New Haven could support a team of their calibre but they have no place large enough to play and still pay out a reasonable rent.

On the local firmament basketball has been, in a semi-pro capacity, a dead issue. Since the days of the Alumni no team has risen above the level of just ordinary. But at Connecticut two Branford boys have blossomed their names into the pages of UConn sports history with the fiery letters of athletic accomplishment.

THE LINESUPS

Huskies: Donnelly, Verinis, Yusevich, Winkler, Cepuch. Red Devils: Petraffess, Maliconico, McHugh, Iwanski, Ferris.

Spares: Conn.: Peterson, Red Devils: Collins, Rubenstein, Blaszyk, Mucha.

Spares: Branford High: Proto, Fortune, E. Petela, Gerlich, Orsenc, Clark, Sobolewski. Branford Battery: Zack, Gmel.

Huskies 1 season ago. Big Pete will travel all the way from Springfield to play one more game with his former mates.

The sad part of it all is that this team will probably never play again as a team. Donnelly is to join the Army in July and Yusevich is rumored to be joining the U. S. Aviation force upon his graduation in June.

From the other side of the fence figure the natural attraction the opening clash would be under ordinary circumstances. Branford High School, even though beaten in the class B title tourney, is still the classiest B school in the state. From their ace shot and playmaker Stan Petela down to the lowliest sub on the scrub team Branford came into the runnerup spot in the tournament the hard way.

With the exception of Petela and probably Lipkovich the team has been a constant change of men all season. It is a tribute to coach Johnny Knecht and his basketball teachings that night and from there to unparalleled heights in the court game.

Three years later the Branford Alumni were seeking a name and they beat the Devils two out of three. Since that time Branford has never beaten the famed "Shooting Circus." John Yusevich and "Bob" Donnelly will take up the cudgel of Branford rivalry against West Haven. And with them will be some of the members of their famous collegiate team "Angie" Verinis, a graduate of Hillhouse and himself a member of the Red Devils before he went to the University of Connecticut will be opposite Donnelly in one of the forward berths.

Yusevich will start at center where he has been rated for two seasons as the All New England Conference center. In the backcourt, taking the ball off the backboards will be "Charlie" Cepuch and "Wink" Winkler of Manchester will be at the other guard spot. Winkler is noted for his dazzling floor game.

Aiding his former mates in this blitz-basketball game will be no other than "Herb" Peterson of East Hartford who captained the

Colonel Averill Urges Caution On Draft Board

Members of Selective Service Boards of Appeal in Connecticut were cautioned today by Colonel Ernest L. Averill, State Director of Selective Service, to guard carefully as individuals against any suspicion of "occupational partisanship" in their official actions because of the occupational activities with which they are affiliated individually.

Director Averill pointed out that a board of appeal, under Selective Service System regulations, must be composite and representative of all major activities in its district. It must include, he said, quoting from these regulations, "one member from labor, one from industry, one physician, one lawyer, and, when applicable, one member from agriculture."

"This provision," he said, "may not be construed to mean that the representative of any occupational activity sit purely as the representative of the interests of that occupation."

"It may not be construed to mean that the members appointed from labor is appointed simply to represent the interests of labor. Nor may it be construed to mean that the members appointed from industry is changed with the responsibility of representing the interests of industry in the partisan sense. The physician, or the lawyer, or the members from agriculture, is not appointed simply as a partisan representative of his profession or occupation."

He explained that the basic idea in providing for such appointments has a belief that the knowledge and understanding of each representative of an occupational activity applied to problems in that field would enable the boards to determine proper classification of registrants with a broader conception of essential factors.

Members appointed from each field of endeavor, Director Averill asserted, should keep in mind that maintenance of national interest must be the primary consideration of each and every member of an appeal board. Each, he declared, must be equally concerned "that the right man is selected and the right man deferred." In this connection he

To The Ladies

Remember the old story about the Woodpecker—He gets there by using his head.

Using your head is mighty important these days. You must not use only what's inside the old noodle but also the "Hank of hair."

So like many other things this season, beauty has gone to the history books for inspiration. And this time it's the Grecian girl.

We're apt to think of her as a marble statue in museums. Or, perhaps, as the aloof goddess, grey-eyed Athena.

Well, translated into flesh and blood, the Greek is the new beauty ideal of 1941.

Special attention is given to the head.

How you dress your hair is important—But not nearly so much so, as how you carry it.

The Greek invasion has already hit the beauty sanctuaries of fifth Avenue. In the exercise emporiums, the customers are playing Greek games.

But it's heads we're interested in today. And heads have definitely gone Greek.

Now a Greek haircut for today's beauty queen has no resemblance whatever to the barbershop variety.

Coffures emerge from dryers with classic curls or heavy knots—every hair in place. The auburn hair rinses that women of Athens used to give themselves are in demand.

So let's suppose you have Goddess ambitions and want to join the Greeks on parade. If you are medium or above in height, you're destined for a happy season. Revel in your Goddess dimensions rather than subdue them.

If you have a good hairline—Widow's peak, especially—show it off in the classic manner. Make the most of heavy hair and don't be afraid of the spring hats. They'll follow the hair.

Millinery Designers have already seen the Greek trend coming and are prepared. They have little skimmers that sit straight on your head. They keep your braids, curls or psyche knot in place, and show off the Widow's peak.

The experts have designed at least a dozen new looking hairdos pointed out that there are no group deferments under the Selective Service Act—that each case must stand "upon its own bottom." He added:

"The importance of the work of an appeal board is further emphasized by the fact that it is the court of last resort in the Nation under the Selective Service System upon all classification matters except questions of deferment because of dependency, to which there is right of appeal under certain conditions to the President of the United States."

Director Averill also urged appeal boards to act as promptly as possible in conformity with fairness on all cases coming before them. In this connection, he pointed out that unnecessary delay in decisions might seriously interfere with the induction of registrants in accordance with their liability for military training, or seriously hamper the production of defense industries.

Martyrdom of 12 graduates has not curtailed the number of students seeking tuition-free training at The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, the school founded by D.L. Moody, noted evangelist. More than 2,200 missionaries, trained in the Institute, have gone to all parts of the world.

Last year alone, nearly 3,000 persons attended Day and Evening Schools, not including the 15,500 enrolled in the Correspondence School. Although the Bible is the principal textbook, the students are also offered Greek, Hebrew, Yiddish, home economics, manual training, public speaking, gospel music, medical instruction for missionary work, and many other subjects.

Nearly 1,600 missionaries are now for you. The pompadour has a softer, gentler swirl, and the psyche knot is brought up to date.

Bulletins from the fashion presses make hot news today.

First item on the list is about a package. Precious things may come in small packages, as the saying goes, but this time they come in rose-strewn ones.

Moss rose patterns have been a fashion trend in everything from bedjackets to carpets this winter. They won further recognition this week. Toilet requisites association awarded the most rose bath accessories and cosmetics the 1940 scroll of honor for excellence in the packaging field.

The designer of the prize-winning containers is Laurence Colwell, who is famous for his victorian styles. He created pink and white striped moire (pronounced moh-ray) paper boxes. And he also designed the porcelain-like jars and bottles that hold bath oil, powder, rouge, cologne, scented balm and lipstick.

Mr. Colwell believes the modern woman demands to be surrounded in her leisure by gracious and lady-like things.

He says that at home, today's woman finds perfect escape from the hectic time, in an aura of ultra-femininity.

This story is about the twelve-dollar face Joan Crawford puts on every morning.

Joan got the face by accident. She was making tests for her new film, "Woman's Face". The camera man insisted that ordinary face powder looked too flat for some of the scenes, that have strange lighting effects. They tried using a coating of glycerine over the make-up. But that was too shiny.

Later in the afternoon, Joan was posing for color photographs. She'd been using gold powder in her hair to get a glistening effect. Some of the flake rubbed off on her cheek. The cameraman yelled: Hold it! That's just what we want."

So Joan mixed some of the gold flake with her ordinary face powder. The result was perfect for the picture.

Joan's now thinking about starting a new vogue for women to use the scintillating powder with evening clothes, under artificial light.
