Land Army Will Serve As Model

The Connecticut Land Army, now being recruited for voluntary paid work on farms this summer, may well serve as a model for the rest of the country as the war goes on and the agricultural labor shortage becomes more acute. That is the opinion of Mrs. Joseph W. Alsop of Avon, Land Army director, who pointed out today that Connecticut is the first state to begin organization of boys and girls, men and women for either full-time or part-time work in agriculture as a war measure. "We are looking toward the future, toward 1943, when the need for farm help will be much greater," Mrs. Alsop said. "Next year we will have a trained organization and experienced workers. And what we have been doing here in Connecticut will be of value as a pattern for the country as a whole." This does not mean that the immediate situation, the need to keep Connecticut agricultural production at a high level in 1942, is being overlooked. Although it was only two months ago that the State defense Council called upon Mrs. Alsop to organize and recruit a Land Army, some 2000 high school boys and girls in all parts of the State have already enlisted and are ready to accept farm jobs this summer if they are needed. The total reported does not include parochial high schools or preparatory school boys, many of whom have signed up. Women will have a chance to volunteer for service in the Land Army at the time they apply for their sugar-rationing cards this week. Land Army representatives will be on hand at sugar-rationing stations with information and registration blanks. Mrs. Ernest Craig and Mrs. Donald Sawtelle are in charge of the local registration. "Many women who want to do something to help the war effort, but whose home responsibilities prevent their taking factory jobs, can sign up for emergency work with the Land Army," Mrs. Alsop pointed out. "Food production is essential to the success of the war program, and women who can spare even a small part of their time will be performing a patriotic service by enrolling."

And, still looking ahead to next year, the state director and other Land Army leaders are considering the possibility of part-time fall and winter courses to train inexperienced people, to prepare them to take a valuable place in the 1943 Food for Freedom Front. Whether groups of boys, girls or women will be organized into Land Army units, to work as groups in various parts of the State, depends on labor needs, Mrs. Alsop said, and to date the Employment Service and the Land Army have been unable to get as complete a picture of the State's labor requirements as they need. County agricultural agents in all counties are assisting in a survey of labor needs, but the farmers of the State as a whole have been slow in filling out and returning their questionnaires, Mrs. Alsop said. "The farmers must get the information to the county agents," she asserted. "We must know what is needed. We can't be of service unless we know where we can be of service."

Victory Gardening
by Dexter Ferry Secretary
Ferry-Morse Seed Co.

Flowers, Too, for Victory
WHILE much stress will be placed this year on vegetable gardening, the cheering effect of flower gardening should not be overlooked. One's spirits need "vitamins," too! Save a small space at one end, or along the borders of your vegetable garden for a few rows of gay flowering, easy-to-grow annuals. Give them sunlight and an occasional hoeing and watering when you are attending to the vegetables alongside. Try a few of these old-fashioned flowers from seed: Dianthus, petunias, marigolds, shirley poppies, calendulas, cornflowers (Bachelor Buttons), cosmos, larkspurs, candy-tuft, four o'clock. They can be sown where they are to bloom and need very little care, yet will repay you a hundred-fold in blossoms all summer. Adequate planting and cultural directions, easy for the beginner to follow, are printed on the backs of all Ferry packets. Glorify the fence or wall around your garden with a few annual flowering vines such as: Spring flowering sweet peas, morning glories, cardinal climber, climbing nasturtiums, cypress vine, hyacinth bean. Effective as screens are: Sunflower, Red and Gold; cosmos, Sensation Mixed; snow-on-the-mountain; Cleome, Giant Pink Queen; four o'clock; castor bean mixed. Give these tall annuals plenty of space to grow, for they are heavy feeders and will make dense shade, which is detrimental to your vegetables and other flowers if planted too close to them. For something simple and topical, try morning glory, Liberty Mixed (a blend of the three most popular morning glories in Red, White and Blue). Other patriotic color schemes can be worked out using petunia, Flaming Velvet, White King, and Blue King; also bachelor button, Red Boy, White and Blue. So plant flowers for morale as well as vegetables for food and KEEP 'EM GROWING.

Beekeeping Course Offered

A free correspondence course of 16 lessons in beekeeping will be offered this year by the Connecticut Beekeepers Association, as part of its wartime program for expanded production of honey as a sugar substitute and of beeswax for industrial uses. For several years the association has annually conducted a beekeeping school in Hartford, under the direction of Claude L. Yates, Hartford apiarist. Because of travel difficulties, Mr. Yates announced today, instruction will be given by mail this summer, and, in addition, a series of classes will be held in the various counties.

The importance of beekeeping as a war industry has been recognized by the Government, Mr. Yates said, its priority rating has been raised from A-11 to A-3. "Many of the 2500 beekeepers in Connecticut have let their bees keep themselves, partly due to lack of understanding," he asserted. To ask these people to expand without offering constructive suggestions is, of course, impractical. This is a challenge to the Connecticut Beekeepers Association, which is proposing to accept."

Mr. Yates said that information regarding the free courses of instruction may be obtained by writing to him at 15 Chapman Street, Hartford.
