AND EAST HAVEN NEWS

Our people wait this war won. They wait only to be told what they can do to make certain it is won. And so far as most of them are concerned, they would just as soon be told today as after November 3.

A town without a group of people earnestly working to promote its progress is like a fine automobile which has run out of gasoline.

Democratic Caucus; Republican Caucus Nominate Candidates

Republicans Name Charles Hobart Page and John S. Rogers For Selectmen—Opposition Favor Frank R. Williams and Louis Atwater.

Democrats and Republicans alike had a busy week with delegates and alternates attending conventions and each party holding its caucus.

The following were nominated as town officers at the Democratic caucus held Saturday night in the town hall: assessor: John Coolac; Board of tax review, John Walsh; selectmen, Frank R. Williams, Louis Atwater; agent town deposit fund, James L. White; grand jurors, Arthur J. Webb, Orrin E. Hoadley, Charles Gaugels; constables, William J. McKee, Michael J. Zvonkovic, Anthony Kiczynski, Harold E. Fenn; Board of Education, one year, Charles E. Jones (unexpired term); three years, Arthur Merrill and Charles Regan, Board of Education.

The Republican Caucus was held Friday night in the town hall, at which time the following candidates were nominated for the various town officers to be elected at the annual town election on Oct. 5: assessor, Charles Reynolds; board of tax review, Harold G. Baldwin; selectmen, Charles Hobart Page, John S. Rogers; agent of town deposit fund, Milton J. Warner; grand jurors, Frank G. Page, Daniel Brandriff, Charles O. Seastrand; constables, Nunziante Sciarretto, Wilbur Burne, Edward W. Walker, Stanley L. Sokolosky; board of education for three years, Milton P. Bradley, Raymond F. Barnes; for one year, no nomination.

Greater Need For Canning

"The greater need for home canning was stressed in a statement from Mrs. Craig, Chairman of the Branford Consumer Committee. Word received from the State Department of Agriculture, Mrs. Craig said, indicates that as a result of increased food allotments for Army, Navy and Lend-Lease, there may be a shortage of some commercially canned fruits and vegetables before the 1942-43 season is over. At the same time that we are faced with a shortage of canned goods the local supply of perishable fruits and vegetables is one of the largest on record. Unless more home grown fruits and vegetables are canned in the home, a large amount of this extra supply may be wasted.

"Revised sugar regulations, Mrs. Craig went on to say, give housewives ample opportunity to preserve wherever and whenever the supply of fruit is available. Local War Price and Rationing Boards authorize to permit the use of any reasonable amount of sugar with the understanding that for each pound of sugar four quarts of fruit will be canned."

DISTINGUISHED GUEST

Charles Allen of Waterbury, district governor of Rotary, was guest of the East Haven Rotary Club this noon at the club's weekly meeting in the auditorium of St. Vincent de Paul's Church.

President Frank Clancy presented the speaker and Edward Whittlesey and William Reilly were program chairmen.

A picture was taken of the group. The club plans to conduct a card party early in October.

RATION SUGAR

In June, 1784 pounds of sugar was given approval by the local rationing board for canning purposes. It was distributed to 223 applicants.

During the next month the number of those applying increased to 259 with a total of 2932 pounds. Permission was granted in August to 443 to use a total of 9700 lbs.

Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Beach have moved into their new home in Elm Street.

Holiday Gifts Must Be Sent By November

Postmaster Joseph Driscoll has received notice from the post officials regarding the shipping of Christmas packages to men and women in the armed forces outside the Continental U. S. A., including Alaska.

Christmas parcels and Christmas cards should be mailed during the period beginning October 1 and ending November 1, 1942, the earlier the better. Special effort will be made to effect delivery of all Christmas parcels mailed during that period in time for Christmas, therefore gift packages should be endorsed "Christmas Parcel."

Size and Weight
The public is urged by the War and Navy Departments to cooperate in conserving shipping space by voluntarily restricting the size of Christmas parcels to that of an ordinary shoe box, and the weight to six pounds. These departments have pointed out also that members of the Armed Forces are amply provided with food and clothing, and the public is asked not to include such matter in gift parcels. Not more than one Christmas parcel or package shall be accepted for mailing.

GOP Invited To Meet New Candidates

The New Haven County Republican Women's Organization will entertain the newly nominated slate of Republican candidates at a luncheon at the YWCA Sept. 22.

Local people who wish to attend may notify Mrs. Milton P. Bradley, a member of the reception committee or Mrs. Grace Hunter, president of the Branford Women's Republican Club.

Guardsmen May Be Observers

A recent letter from the State Director of Aircraft Warning Service has been received clarifying the position of State Guardsmen as observers.

All State Guardsmen who wish to be observers may do so with the understanding that they relinquish their observers duty when and if they are called for State guard duty. This also means that they must notify their assistant chief observer that they have been called and cannot go on duty as an air observer.

This also shows that the Aircraft Warning Service is definitely the first line of defense, as it is very essential that two people be on duty at all times.

While it is often regarded as a very wasteful two hour duty by people who are not active, all active observers realize the importance of their duty.

The duty of observers covers more than just reporting routine flights and all observers are cautioned to follow the bulletins posted on the post. While our local post has been active 24 hours every day since Pearl Harbor with relatively few changes in personnel we wish at this time to welcome the new high school students who are entering their initial duties. David Clark has been appointed Captain of the Student team and anyone unable to fill his turn will notify his captain.

The new student observers are: David Stevens, Teddy Melnichuk, Kenneth Ericson, Dick Jackson, Albert Jackson, Louis Ritzinger, Gilbert Martme, Mike Karpenski, Carl Gullans, Jr., Leroy Bartholomew, Kenneth Bray, Van Wilgren, Briggs, Samson, Hanson, Henniger, Duffy, Hawkes, Eastwood, Fox.

All these new observers must get in touch with the identification officer Harry Riddle, who will arrange for pictures and fingerprinting for local and army identification cards. He will also provide special passes until the official cards are ready. No one is allowed on the post without a pass.

The Chief Observer, Mr. Robert B. Cate, now has full authority on gasoline requisitions and by phoning him, the observers may obtain from him direct the coupons for gasoline.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis Pratt, 26 Kirkham Street will entertain the Branford Grange Dramatic Club this evening.

There will be a meeting of the State Forest Fire Company this evening.

Americans All Says Baldwin

The text, in part, of Raymond E. Baldwin's acceptance speech upon his nomination for governor follows:

We are a people at war—a war for our very lives. We are going to win this war—come what may—we are going to win this war—and to that end—as did our fathers of old "We pledge our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor."

We are Republicans. We Republicans here in Connecticut irrespective of our individual ages, are "Young Republicans." We are Young Republicans because we have built a new, liberal, progressive Republican Party. We can say this boldly because we have already proven it. From 1939 to 1941 all of us working together gave to the people of this state better and more forward-looking government than they had seen in a generation.

HALF-STAFF
Flags of the town and later of the state were at half-staff this week as a silent, impressive tribute to two of Branford's leading citizens.
J. Edwin Brainard and Ernest L. Averill lived in other cities at various times in their important careers but both returned here for their last illnesses. Both, while active in state civic and national affairs, were also active in their own town and retained it as their voting address. Of late they took less active participation in local affairs but knew what was going on in town and were ever willing to lend a hand.
It is rarely that a community of our size claims two such well-known men and it can ill afford to lose them.

FLORIDA—HERE WE COME
With good intentions an automobile association, this week urged the national rational oil officials to allot additional gas to those who want to travel south for the cold months. We presume the association would encourage those who are unemployed or physically unable to contribute to New England's war effort.
The object of the request, says the association is to save fuel here.
That's just ducky for those who could be honest about it.
But can you see the picture? Knowing something of the rent situation, especially in Connecticut, it is easy to envision a homeowner packing light clothes for his gas saving jaunt while he rents his home to war workers. It would be unparliamentary to let his oil heated home remain vacant when so many families look helplessly for rents.
It must be wonderful to go South when the thermometer drops and the fuel bill rises. I hope it can be arranged, but let's not call it a fuel saving proposition.

WATER-PISTOLS WON'T WORK
Bouquets to the Branford man who threw up his job this week. Gave up a good paying, snappy job in a war industry plant because he could no longer tolerate being ordered to bluff the work, pretend to be busy.
For the lack of steel.
Over a month ago this same man dragged his job trying to make a day of it, anticipating that steel would arrive any day so he, a married man with a family could do the one thing he knew to smash Hitler. Days dragged bit work.
For the lack of steel.
It is said that 800 men have left Branford, gone to fight, fight with what? If blast furnaces close for want of material how can 800 of America's fighting men be expected to protect themselves and country to say nothing of their ability to defeat the enemy. For the lack of steel.

Civilian Defense's attempt to collect junk melted approximately 108 tons. Presumably one half of this class. It was an attempt, but spasmodic drives are not sufficient. The need is greater and greater so civilian efforts must be intense and more intense if the last scrap of steel junk is to be salvaged and sent P.D.C. to Germany.
Which all goes to remind us that buried beneath the town's traffic is about 600 tons of the best possible steel rails. What, we question, because of the appeal made months ago by the State Salvage committee that those trolley tracks be dug up and salvaged.
Why, men alive, that's almost a ton for each local boy in service!

GET INTO STEP
By those who visited and enjoyed the facilities of public waterfront bathing beaches in Branford, the town's waterfront along the Sound from Westley to Stamford, the consent of East Haven town officials to defer action on the sale of the Sea Spray property at Cosy Beach until the October town meeting is applauded. They see in the airing of this item of public business at a town meeting where a representative body of citizens is assured, an opportunity to bring East Haven into line with the enterprising communities along the Connecticut shore in a direction in which this town has heretofore been deficient.
To most of the townspeople who have given the question little if any consideration the Sea Spray property consists of nothing more than a rocky land extending from the end of Cos avenue to the water—a more or less useless bit of ground strewn with the charred ruins of the one-time Sea Spray Baths. They see it as a bit of land left over from the boom times of the Twenties, taken by the town for lack during the depression, and now a hangover that could well be disposed of for a few dollars—the sooner the better.
But to others that bit of waterfront land presents a challenge. They see it as an opening wedge, a nucleus if you will, of a future shore recreation place, playground and bathing beach reaching along the heart of the East Haven shore—a public area which future generations of townspeople can enjoy forever.
For many months the Monaghan Park or as it is better known the Hotel Property has been for sale by the Connecticut Company. It has been generally known that the company would rather dispose of this property to the townspeople than let it go into private hands. In order to encourage such action there is no question that a much more favorable price would be quoted to the town than to private interests, if the townspeople expressed a willingness in that direction. This hotel property with its bathing beach and spacious grounds abuts directly upon the Sea Spray plot.
Years ago Cosy Beach was one of the beauty spots of the Connecticut shore. The possibilities are still there. Can anyone honestly refute that the establishment of a park for townspeople in this area would have a beneficial influence upon the whole of the waterfront area? Officials of the Cosy Beach Improvement association representing some 200 cottage owners, spend their summers at the shore. They are closer to the situation than anyone else and they, be it pointed out, have unanimously gone on record as favoring a move toward a waterfront park. They see in such a project a trend toward improved conditions along the shore.

DEALER ENTERPRISE IN AMERICA
When automobile plants turned over all their production facilities to war weapons, thousands of dealers all over the country were left with very little to sell. What does the average American dealer do in a case like this? Does he quit and go on relief?
No, he looks around to find some way he can help his country in the war. He goes into the military services, he goes into the industry, or he adjusts his business to existing conditions.
His kind of dealer automobile dealers are now selling blackout materials, aircraft skins, poultry feed, or beer. Some have converted their show-rooms into bowling alleys and night clubs. Radio dealers are selling guns and other amusements. Wholesale grocers are selling flour, cosmetics, and hosiery. Drug stores, no longer able to get clocks, appliances, and other department store stocks are putting increased emphasis on drug sales.
The spirit of America in war as well as in peace is to take what comes, make the best of it and cling to these things that have made this nation unbeatable.

MISLEADING FRACTIONS
"The United Steel Workers' Union, basing itself on Government statistics," according to the Daily Worker, "informed the country last week that for the first six months of 1942 the amount of man-days lost by strikes in war industries amounts to the pitiful figure of .00 of 1 percent."
A very interesting figure—less than one-tenth of one percent—and a decided credit to the great body of war workers, union and non-union, who have worked hard and steadily in the interest of their country. But, to quote The New York Times, which bases its statement on a War Labor Board report, "Strikes in war industries caused a loss of 1,180,078 man-days' work in the first seven months of this year."
In terms of percentage the figure is small, but in terms of man-days and lost production, it looms as a danger to our whole war effort. In the man-days lost during the first seven months of this year, more than 360 two-engine bombers could have been produced. And in addition to this is the fact that a few men can tie up whole war plants. And when a few plants can tie up our whole war effort, then this fraction of one percent becomes a positive menace.
While only about 120 men were involved in a recent dispute at an Indiana steel plant, their strike affected 700 workers amid halted work in two mills. Four hundred striking molders in six Ohio foundries kept an additional 800 workmen from jobs—all plants engaged in 100 percent war production.
If we are to get a true picture of war work stoppages lost time should be figured in terms of man-days and actual production rather than in illusory, misleading fractions.
A course of local events through which the townspeople are reminded of the fact that the establishment of a park for townspeople in this area would have a beneficial influence upon the whole of the waterfront area? Officials of the Cosy Beach Improvement association representing some 200 cottage owners, spend their summers at the shore. They are closer to the situation than anyone else and they, be it pointed out, have unanimously gone on record as favoring a move toward a waterfront park. "MIGHTY WILL BE OUR FLOWSHARES"
"Today we produce to destroy, but tomorrow we will produce to build." These were the words of Dr. Charles M. A. Stine at a recent meeting of the American Chemical Society as he described the new vistas to be opened to America after this war is won.
In a thousand and one chemical laboratories throughout America chemists are discovering new constituents of matter at such a rapid pace under the pressure of war that "the world of 1940 has already become an antiquity," he said.
"The inconceivables of only two years ago are today's realities. The war is compressing into the space of months developments which might have taken a half a century to realize if necessity had not forced the pace.
"These pressures are unprecedented. The developments are unprecedented. Give us a victorious peace and the freedom of enterprise! Let our swords be mighty and mighty indeed will be our plowshares."

WASHING TON SNAPSHOTS
BY JAMES PRESTON
TO dash public lay hopes, skeletal instead of robust, came out of the big Labor Day stabilization drive Congress, with a one-way ticket dated October 1, must reach the terminal on the early pull into a siding for the War Power Special. Capitol Hill bowed and wailing, under pressure groups, elections, an executive ban, delectable wares and means for adequate stabilization—not solved by any program extant. Meantime wages and prices soar and lamb chops reach new heights.
Any Congressional midnight oil formula, in the opinion of many, will be acceptable to the White House so long as it conforms to the specifications of the President's original seven-point program.
DRASTIC civilian product concentration machinery has been set up to speed the war production program. All manufacturers, from baby carriages to caskets, will be affected. Plants converted to war production will be permitted to keep track of their civilian output through advertising on a scale based on previous advertising investments.
WBPB has designated two of the twelve concerns that have been making bicycles to produce all bicycles to be manufactured in the United States "for the duration." These may produce a combined total of 10,000 bicycles a month, which represents 20 percent of the total supply for the duration. While trade marks may not be used by either concern under this program, one may use the letter "W" to designate those temporarily converted to war production.

Reflections for eye difficulties said to be the reason—Averill's back it would have been awkward not to have a flag on the green in put at half-staff. Tuesday's heat brought out bathing suits again—Apple time—Ed Brainard was fond of petunias. My first recollections of Erie Averill were at a tide a few years past when his party leaders marched to his home in a campaign parade by the light of red flares. That was about 20 years ago. Police Chief Woelke off for vacation—August weather. Mrs. Clayton Foote, Wilfred Ave., vacations from library. As is Mable Goddard, Cherry Hills Road, whose work is at the M. I. Twenty thousand pounds of nickel—enough to make armor-plate for 55 medium tanks—will be conserved this year by one manufacturer through substitution of a newly developed steel for a nickel alloy in war-needed electronic equipment.
Because they played so big a part in the achievement, subcontractors were honored guests at a Wisconsin Harrison house, Main Street, redecorated to accommodate Rolfe's Furniture Shop. Off come the sweaters and coats—Football appears in the stores.

THE NIGHT NURSE
She's dressed in her uniform, snowy white. And always to us, is a welcome sight. She walks with a firm, and even tread. As she greets each one, in their own little bed. She tucks them all in, and turns out the light. Knowing they'll sleep, right thru the night. There's a dear little lady, who isn't well. She calls to the nurse, not ringing her bell. She's tucked comely, the pillows made tight. The door softly closed, to keep out the light. Each hour she's about, making her rounds. Keen and alert, for any strange sounds. When dawn breaks the sky, early next morn. There's always a baby, who has just been born. Side dressed in all, with cherry good-byes. Waving to each, amid heavy sighs. She's off to her own little bed. Aching and tired, feeling forlorn. I wish there were glory, for this girl. No glory for her, do we ever unfurl. But she's happy and gay, as you all can see. She's doing good work, for you and for me. Helene Corcoran.

MARJORIE WON THE PRIZE
There were only five cars parked in front of Eyer Meyer's garage when the garden club met there the other afternoon although at least twenty women were present. But nowadays we double up when we go places and one car has to do the work of two or three. We brought our own sugar, too, because Eyer had used up even her quota for canning. Otherwise there was nothing in that peaceful afternoon to remind us of the war—until a truck stopped in front of the house and two men came up and asked for "the lady of the house."
"We're working with the salvage committee," one of the men said. "We dropped in to see if you have any old scrap iron or rubber you could give us. There's a shortage of practically all scrap materials so we've volunteered to collect all we could."
"Well," said Eyer, "I don't know that I have anything left, because I have already scavenged the house from top to bottom, but if you'll wait a minute we can look around again and see." So, Eyer took the men into the house and in a few minutes we saw them coming out loaded down with baskets of what looked like just so much trash to us. When Eyer joined us later she told us that these two men had been working all week on the scrap drive and had collected tons of old scrap iron and rubber because many of the war plants may have to shut down unless they get enough scrap materials.

Have it because they need it badly and after all, they are only after the things we don't need.
Well, the garden party ended up that afternoon as a scrap party and you should have seen the things we collected for the drive. There were old tin trons, garden hose, lawn mowers, rakes, hoes, old rubber gloves, jar rings—everything you can think of. But Marjorie really won the prize when she got Wed's old broken-down car out of their barn, and drove it down to the scrap yard. She said it took the garage man an hour to get it started but it wasn't doing them any good where it was and why not give it to Uncle Sam—he had always been pretty good to them?

No Shortages Of Electricity Anticipated

C. L. Campbell, President of the Connecticut Light and Power Company, revealed today that members of the War Production Board and officials of the power company have conferred recently on the problem of possible rationing of electricity in this area.
"In our territory," Mr. Campbell declared, "neither WPB officials nor executives of our own company anticipate any shortage of power in any locality and to effect a spread of available power so that consumers over a large area will share any curtailment equally."
"For example," Mr. Campbell explained, "our company will be in case of drought, be called upon to contribute power to Massachusetts and New England states. Or we might be ordered to furnish some of our electricity for transmission to western New York State, where power shortages are possible."
Even though he said severe curtailment of the use of electricity in this area would be unlikely since other companies throughout New England will be contributing to the relief of any shortage and since the carrying capacity of existing transmission lines to western New York State and other sections is not unlimited.
The Connecticut Light and Power Company is, however, complying with the WPB request to set up plans for power rationing should such steps become necessary.
"Naturally in any plan which is adopted," Mr. Campbell explained, "proper considerations will be given to residential customers who must have electricity for operation of automatic furnaces and for mechanical refrigeration of food."
Company engineers and a carefully planned management policy have been responsible for the company's ability to meet the rapidly increased demand for power in this highly industrialized territory, Mr. Campbell said.
He pointed out that in 1939, before the depression was over, "we installed $5,000,000 worth of generating equipment in anticipation of a business recovery which would require more electricity. In 1939 we ordered an additional 45,000 kilowatts of capacity which will be available by October 1 of this year. With the facilities now available and under construction, the company should be able to meet new requirements definitely known to be coming and have something left over for additional loads which cannot now be anticipated."

LIGHT LINES by R.K.
Seems to me I've been saying "Goodbye" a great deal lately.
I've said "Goodbye" and added "Godspeed" to more than 100 men at The Connecticut Light and Power Company who left to enter the service of their country.
I'm mighty proud of those boys, too. Half of them volunteered for service, instead of waiting to be called.
Their experience, leadership and skill are shown by the fact that 22 of them are commissioned officers and 47 more are non-commissioned officers.
That means that about three out of four C. I. & P. men in our country's armed forces are in responsible positions—leading other men.
Losing men of that caliber naturally throws a heavy burden on the capable men still on the job.
But they're working hard to make sure that war industries get the electricity that must be supplied if production is to go on.
They're watching out for your home, too.
And they're glad that...
ELECTRICITY IS STILL CHEAP
