

Aviation Cadet Student Fliers Ready to Go

Under the wing of a giant four-motored bomber, these Aviation Cadet students at Midland Army Air Field, Texas, await the start of a bombing mission over targets on the surrounding Texas prairie. Soon their "Bombs Away!" will sound in the skies over Axis countries as the aviators of Uncle Sam deliver the goods.

This is a story behind the news, behind today's dramatic headlines that read: "American Bombers Pound Invasion Coast," "German Industrial Targets Bombed Third Successive Day" or "Jap Positions Battered From the Air."

That's the story of teamwork, both in the Armed Forces and in the Nation's factories, but to a great extent this is a story of an unerring skill and accuracy of the bombardier. Between the moment when a young American of seven-teen joins the Air Corps cadet Reserve and the moment when a bomb hits the enemy target, there exists a long, carefully planned chain of events, for this is the attack in the fullest sense of the word.

The choice of Aviation Cadets is itself the result of a careful screening. Only those who are best suited, both physically and mental, for air combat are chosen. An exhaustive series of tests determine which of this group is to become bombardier, navigators or pilots. Frequently, a man who would be a fair pilot, let us say, will be suddenly equipped for the bombardier's role or vice versa. It is the constant purpose of the Air Forces to see to it that each candidate finds the niche in which he can make his greatest contribution. Repeated tests are made to insure a continuing state of physical and mental well-being on the part of each student aviator.

When an enemy objective feels the weight and power of an American bombing attack, it receives what is in fact the culmination of many months of preparation. Skills developed on the ground and in the air, bombing accuracy attained perhaps over the prairie of Texas come into play. And victory comes one step nearer.

America's careful training methods are paying dividends today. Farther afield, look at tomorrow's headlines.

Who's News?

By Edie Ferris
Most exciting job of scribbling in radio is that of pretty Marjorie Sloan, known here. She pens the continuity of the Wednesday Night network from a den of the Master Mental-Dangerous blues are to a large extent and reads minds on the spot during a 6 a. m. airing.

For Miss Sloan knows in advance who will be in the studio or what the subjects will be. Unhappily, Phil offers are coming the way of John Brown and Georgia Backus, who were both veterans of the Alibonies. John, former Fred Allen stooge, and Georgia, who starred in the famed "Arbuckle" series years ago, play Mr. and Mrs. Foster in "A Date With Judy," new NBO Tuesday series.

In "The Parker Family," Fridays on the Blue network, "Richard" is into overacting; now he's even making mischief on other programs.

Michael O'Day, show news hero, who plays the role, is also currently portraying the trouble some young man in "The New Adventures of Perry Mason," weeknights over CBS.

The menace in "Mr. District Attorney," on NBO Wednesday nights, has an interesting weekly substitute away from the program. Dwight Weitz has written a play, "Trust Kill You," Paul Stewart will produce an as yet untried Broadway show and Ann Thomas has been assigned to act in "Dear Bella," due to open soon.

Featured here is "Miss West V-A" of 1944. She's Margaret June Evans, she is pretty, she is talented as listeners to the Sunday "Mental Seemingly" program will tell you. She's going to sing in the "Mental Seemingly" on the stage of the Capitol Theatre in Wheeling by Carl G. Wayman, Commander of the First American Legion Post in the country.

USO Observes Third Birthday

USO today celebrates its third anniversary with 48 clubs and other service units in operation throughout Connecticut. It was learned today from Oliver V. Ober, State Chairman, "USO is rendering outstanding service in Connecticut through its clubs, railroad lounges, recreation facilities and social halls are operated in New London, Niantic and Windsor Locks in government owned buildings, while privately owned facilities are used in Bridgeport, Darien, Hartford and other communities.

"Three years ago USO was only a hope in the hearts of a handful of men and women. An anniversary message to Mr. Ober from Chester Bernard, President of USO. Today it has close to 3,000 operating units serving the fighting forces and the forces behind the lines all over the western hemisphere. Troupes of USO-Camp Shows are playing in every combat zone around the world.

"Practically all Americans have joined in making USO a peoples service to its fighting forces, by giving generously to USO. Every dollar received has come as a voluntary contribution from the American people, made through such organized effort as the Connecticut War Fund Campaign which raised money in the state for the USO. On its third anniversary, USO gratefully acknowledges the support and cooperation of millions of friends in Connecticut and through out the nation."

CARD FROM PRISONER

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Flesche received a post card Tuesday from Sgt. James Comer, a prisoner of war of Germany. The message was dated November 13 and is the first to be received here. Under regulations it was brief and uninformative.

It couldn't be—It couldn't. Ed was in the States receiving training under the jurisdiction of Uncle Sam. The same Uncle Sam fitted Steve Goodenow for service and sent him overseas to England. The uniformed man beside his cot couldn't be his brother Ed, because Ed was in the States. Steve rubbed his eyes and raised to his elbow. "Two years on foreign soil plays tricks," but Steve was certain his eyesight hadn't failed him. His mind was perfectly clear.

Golly, it was Ed!

Both brothers have written home of the joy in visiting with the other three hours and each wrote that his brother looked very well. Steve writes it was "the surprise of my life."

When last heard from Sgt. Arthur J. White, Jr., of Clark Avenue, was in New Guinea.

WOUNDED

Miss Rebecca Smith reported today to Hunter College for WAVE boot training.

Retailers Meet Bond Quotas

Waterbury is leading the state in the Fourth War Loan retail program. Out of 913 stores in the city, more than 40 have already attained their quotas of $200 in E Bonds for each employee, thereby becoming eligible to display the Fourth War Loan retail Banner, Frank L. State War Finance retail chairman, said Tuesday.

War Bonds amounting to $1,117,125, as of February 5, have been sold by a retail army of more than 3000 Waterbury employees, Mr. Cashman said. E bonds included in that figure, he pointed out, amount $725,000, which is over 70 percent of the retail quota.

Fourth War Loan citations have been awarded to at least 200 of Waterbury's retail employees. These citations signify that the bearer has attained his individual quota for the drive.

The Waterbury War Finance Retail Committee, under the chairmanship of Clyde Jennings, is composed of 18 of the city's leading business men representing department, chain, women's and men's wear, shoe, grocery, jewelry, drug, real estate, liquor, furniture, restaurant and miscellaneous establishments as well as the Waterbury Chamber of Commerce.

Seventy members of the War Finance women's section, under the leadership of Miss Nancy Delaney, are acting as retail canvassers and servicing agents.

Retailers in the state have been asked by the Treasury to meet a Fourth War Loan quota of $15,000,000 in E Bonds.

IMPROVED VEGETABLES FOR CONNECTICUT

A new variety of rutabaga and an improvement of a pole lima bean variety are announced by Dr. A. M. Porter, associate professor of vegetable gardening at the University of Connecticut.

Seeking a rutabaga that would meet the qualification of the northern-grown vegetable shipped into the state in large quantities each year, Dr. Porter has developed a variety given the name of Storrs. A mild flavored, yellow rutabaga that cooks up medium yellow in color, garden trials show it to be fast growing, tender, fine grained, and not fibrous. It is suitable for either commercial or home garden production.

Commercial seedsmen who grew the Storrs rutabaga in trial plots last year are particularly impressed with its quality. It is a cross between an American strain of the Long Island type, and a popular English variety.

Dr. Porter's improved pole lima bean variety is the Silas Whipple, originated by the late Silas Whipple of Norwich, a plant breeder who developed the well-known Golden Yellow sweet corn bearing his name. Securing seed from Mr. Whipple, Dr. Porter has selected it for uniformity of size and shape. It is a mid-season variety, producing large, meaty, tender beans. In trial production it has been an enormous yielder.

Dr. Porter began the breeding work for these varieties and also for the new Coventry tomato, recently announced, several years ago. Seed of the new vegetables is available in limited quantities for home gardeners or commercial growers who wish to try them. Requests for trial packages should be sent to Dr. A. M. Porter, University of Connecticut, Storrs.
