RECEIVES COMMISSION

Miss Mary Kamerzel

Nurse Kamerzel Has Commission

The many friends of Miss Mary Kamerzel, former popular visiting nurse, were pleased to hear of her receiving a commission of second lieutenant on being inducted into the army recently. Now stationed at Fort Devens, Mass., where she is receiving her basic training, Miss Kamerzel looks forward to her first assignment, attached to some medical unit.

During the eight years connection with the Health Center as visiting nurse she was highly esteemed by her associates and the legion of friends she made in the community. Previously to entering the service of the local Visiting Nurse Association she graduated from the Massachusetts Memorial Hospital of Boston and took post graduate work in public health nursing in Chicago. Although carrying on the wide variety in the local field her nursing work with young mothers was deeply appreciated by this group. Her spontaneous and pleasing personality will be greatly missed in the many homes which she has served and the many friends made during the years look forward to her return in the life of the community again.

Leaving this vital service to the community short handed every effort will be made to maintain its high quality of service in the interim, is the expression of the officers of the association.

Branford Hi-Y Has Large Delegation To "Youth And Government" Assembly In State Capitol Friday and Saturday—Follow Pattern of State Legislature.

Miss Vee Ling Compares Life With Chinese

Miss Vee Ling, instructor in the Chinese language at Yale University was so impressed with the family companionship when 94 grandmothers, mothers and daughters sat down for an annual Mother-Daughter banquet in the First Congregational Church that she changed her talk to family relationship.

Miss Ling said America should be very grateful that they can sit down at such a meal. Her family is in occupied territory. Chinese she said love and respect their parents, but are not demonstrative. On the other hand she thinks we are too demonstrative and too disrespectful.

Previous to the talk Mrs. Robert Juniver played a piano solo, "In a Chinese Garden."

The affair was given by the Social Workers with its officers hostesses and Mrs. Theodore Dahl, supper chairman.

Everyone present received a rainbow corsage made by Mrs. Mable Richardson.

The Connecticut Hi-Y "Youth and Government" General Assembly, conducted by the State Y. M. C. A., will convene for the first time at the State Capitol, Hartford, next Friday and Saturday.

They'll follow the pattern of the state legislature, even to receiving a message from Gov. Raymond E. Baldwin in a joint assembly shortly after the Senate and House are organized.

The purpose of the "Youth and Government" program of the Y. M. C. A., explained Lisle T. Ware, secretary of the Connecticut Y. M. C. A., "is to prepare youth for leadership in the American democratic process through training and experience in determining public policy.

At a pre-legislative training conference held at Yale recently, the members of the General Assembly were advised on the essentials of good bill drafting, and after sessions presided over by Chief Justice William M. Maltbie of the Supreme Court, and Mayor Francis R. Danaher of Meriden, elected officers, who will be in charge of next Friday's and Saturday's sessions.

More than a score of bills, coming from eight committees face the youth legislators, who'll tackle them with the same vim and vigor as the elder statesmen, even though passage of the bills in this case doesn't make them laws.

Soldier Returned From 26 Months Overseas Service Tells Of Experiences With Boys of Branford Battery Stationed In New Guinea.

Under the command of Captain Leonard L. Morris, Battery H left Branford in January 1941. Seventy-eight men and six officers comprised the outfit. After an eight day induction period they left for a year's training at Camp Edwards, Falmouth, Mass.

From there they went to Australia, and then to New Guinea, where they have remained. About two weeks ago a small group was given long enough furloughs to return to their homes, among them Pfc. Joseph Purcell of Chestnut Street.

Joe has been very busy but took time out, by request, to tell the following bits about his island home.

Native wedding ceremonies fascinate the boys from Branford. The wooer presents himself in loin cloth and war paint and carries his best and most vicious weapons to the hut of the girl's parents. There he is received ceremoniously and offers shillings, pounds or black tobacco, according to his wealth. In exchange he receives his bride, gowned in a skirt of grass.

Oriental tom-toms beat out rhythmic music and the wedding dance and feast commences.

Cpl. Olsto J. Gargarmell, Cpl. David Galdenzi, Pfc. Steven Lipkovich, Sgt. Arthur Fortune, Cpl. Burton Dickinson and Gino Panaroni, accompanied Purcell on one of these adventures.

For refreshments, betel nut and lime were served. This diet produces black teeth and red gums, so highly prized by natives that they are considered an indication of rank or high society.

The betel pepper is cultivated extensively and its chewing is enormous. The area nut mixed with lime and chewed with betel leaves acts as a stimulant and produces blackened teeth, so highly favored.

Taro root too, is a leading plant in the Pacific Islands and is widely cultivated. Its starchy root is made into bread and poi.

To the heat of tom-toms, 200 to 300 members of the tribe ate betel nut, lime, taro root and bananas, while their white guests visioned the girl back home in misty veil, satin and pearls coming down the church aisle on the arm of her father.

Following festivities the black skinned bridegroom introduces his bride to his own hut and their married life begins.

After a reasonable length of time, should she prove unsatisfactory she may be returned to the hut of her father. Purcell neglected to state if the unhappy bridegroom was entitled to a rebate.

Pigs are considered more valuable than wives. They are easily disposed of and are less trouble.

At three bells everyone went below and enjoyed refreshments.

news was put out the other day as just another achievement in American chemistry. The story reads like a fairy tale. The new woods are not discoloring in the process of hardening, but they take days in all colors that go all the way through the wood. So Wilmington can grow a forest in its laboratories, and through chemical science it can produce a thousand kinds of soft woods that are as hard as steel.

INVASION ALARMS Since ancient times diplomats have been privileged persons retaining even during war the right to come and go and to communicate in code with their home governments. This privilege was swept away by Great Britain last week when the diplomats of neutral nations and even of England's smaller allies were forbidden to leave or to send out the customary unencumbered messages.

WAR II VETERANS Roughly there are 100 World War II Veterans discharged from military service and returned to help in their adjustment to a local community is being set up. Washington reports that 100,000 War Veterans are already on the pension roll and veterans administrator Frank T. Hines says in opposing pension legislation at this time: "We had better defer action on covering the field until we know more about what the results of this war are going to be. I am frank to say that any one who can predict what the cost of this legislation will lead to can do better calculating than I can."

Before returning to normal civilian life, the returning serviceman needs assistance of one sort or another. Some need prosthetic clothing, others medical or psychiatric treatment, help in procuring their rights as veterans, vocational training or consultation on personal problems. That is where the Branford committee will fit into the picture.

WHO'S RUNNING NOW? Inasmuch as President Roosevelt and Governor Dewey are showing up as the outstanding favorites of the Democratic and Republican parties, the nomination of the two men seems almost certain. There is considerable doubt being expressed in Washington as to whether the President will allow his name to be presented to the Chicago convention as a candidate this fall. On the other hand, no one seems to doubt but what Governor Dewey will accept a "draft."

WASHINGTON BELL RINGERS (J. E. Jones) Vice President Wallace is going to China as a representative of the President, presumably to assure Chiang Kai-shek that there will be plenty of aid from the American government, all the way from Lend-Lease to active military, naval and air support. Of course Madame Chiang will look into the matter back home a long time ago.

WILMINGTON WONDERLAND The use of General MacArthur's name is apparently unauthorized. A few other candidates, including Governor Bricker of Ohio and ex-governor Stassen of Minnesota, will receive the support of their States at the coming election. In case of a deadlock, some one of these black-horse candidates may win out. Maybe so, maybe so! What's the matter with Connecticut's Governor Baldwin?

POST-WAR PLANNING By Ruth Taylor All over the country men are talking and thinking of post-war planning. What will happen after the war? The dread spectre of unemployment stands at the door of all workers' homes.

"Radio Repairwoman" Is the Title of This Women's Army Corps Member

Complicated mechanisms of airplane radios are no mystery to WAC radio repairwomen. In important bases of the Army Air Forces, they are earning the admiration and commendation of their fellow soldiers for the ability with which they are doing more than 225 types of jobs. Many of them, like the one shown here, are highly technical.

"We were making a beach head when nap planes appeared overhead. A few got hurt but our planes came and paid them back. We dug for holes. Most of the islands so we went after them. More trouble. They didn't get far as our Navy was waiting for them and they sure got the works. Later we were sent to rest camps in New Zealand. It was fun while it was there. "I just hope and pray that this war will soon end so we all can go home and be happy again."

A Hunting, He Did Go Australian stew is wicked. Everything goes into it except meat. In New Guinea when a fellow has plenty and he's fed up on beans, beef and Australian stew he takes his gun in hand and stags into forest land. Ducking he will go. Of the 10 or more varieties on the island the boys-bet recalled four shot at and killed a plump bully beef and returned the black duck. Promptly they returned to camp where Sgt. Phil Dombrowski was detailed to de-feather and clean the bird with other super-tending below the hill and it became increasingly difficult for Purcell to keep his mind on the duty to which he was assigned. When relief arrived, he too, ran from the guard shack and joined in the excitement. An 18 foot python was the cause of the interruption of routine. Fryer and steam bled in an oven made in a hole in the earth under which a hot fire had been started.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH THIS PICTURE?

Onions Attract War Gardeners

Onions, because of their scarcity in the market the past winter, are attracting an unusual amount of interest on the part of home gardeners this spring, says Professor A. E. Wilkinson, Extension Service garden specialist at the University of Connecticut.

Onion sets also are very scarce and high in price this spring, according to Mr. Wilkinson. Many gardeners, he says, will do well to find a source of onion plants. Some commercial growers sell onion plants and others are willing to grow them for gardeners who put their orders. If purchased from outside Connecticut they should be bought from states farther south.

Growing onions from seed is difficult for the home gardener because of trouble with diseases. Commercial growers are equipped to cope with this problem and can furnish disease free plants. Thin, maggot and smut are likely to be encountered if sets or plants are purchased.

Benezecr and Golden Globe are the varieties recommended if sets can be obtained. If onion plants are bought, Sweet Spanish is the variety recommended.

Soil in which onions are to be grown should be finely prepared. Onions need lime and half a pound should be worked into the soil for each 100 feet of row. Fertilizer should be applied in trenches an inch or half deep on both sides of the row and about four inches away. A pound of 5-10-5 for 22 feet of row will be sufficient.

Onion rows should be twelve inches or more apart. Onion sets are placed in small holes made with a dibber or sharpened stick and four to six inches apart. The holes should be deep enough to cover the onion set. Sets planted for scallions or rarer types should be planted more closely. Onion plants such as the Sweet Spanish should be spaced six inches apart. From an inch to an inch and a half of lime should be covered with soil.

The Sweet Spanish onions grow to large size and can be successfully stored.

PLANTING DAYS
Take advantage of the good planting days in the Spring and get the hardy crops in the ground. Plant shallow, if you would root early. Firm the soil over the seeds.

CANNING SURVEY
Your present supply of home canned vegetables should serve as a definite guide for your planting schedule and also what this year's canning supply should be.

COMMUNITY MEETING
It is hoped that as many as possible will attend the special community meeting this Friday night at the Library. Gardens and home canning are still vital to the war effort, and the committee in charge take this means of bringing pertinent information to the people of Branford. Future ration points depend in part on 1944 Victory Gardens.

GARDEN GADGETS
Fancy garden gadgets will not solve the labor problem in the victory garden. The best work is done with the good old-fashioned hoe.

FLOWER BORDER
Complete the tidying-up as soon as possible and if obtainable scratch in a sprinkling of home made or other fertilizer. Established clumps may be divided when new growth is starting. Roses should be planted early and old plants pruned.

GARDEN PLANNING
Spring fever usually makes for a good early vegetable garden, but it takes planning to maintain production right through to the end of the season. (Horticulture)

WILD GEESSE PASSIN' BY
South in the fall and north in the spring.

Over the country and back they're flying.
Two long lines in a V-shaped fan, Gabblin' as they fly.
Over the land where the rivers run, Flappin' in the sky.

Gray old leader at the peak.
Back at the end are the goslings, Honkin' down to the ground-tied man.
Mighty desirably.
Fancy garden gadgets will not solve the labor problem in the victory garden. The best work is done with the good old-fashioned hoe.

Wish! I could follow that old gray swine.
But shucks! Wishin' ain't no use; Nor it ain't any use to pine.
Sometimes I sigh
And wish myself when I watch that line
Or wild geese passin' by.

LETTUCE, CABBAGES GO IN GARDEN THIS WEEK

By this time, the home gardener will have most seeds of the early hardy crops sown, and is thinking about setting out his early plants—cabbage, cauliflower, head lettuce, broccoli and the like.

If he follows a few simple rules, the war gardener can obtain large, solid heads of lettuce, and cauliflower, broccoli and cabbage of a fine quality as that grown by commercial truck farmers, says Dr. Donald F. Jones of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station. The most important thing to remember is that these vegetables require plenty of room. Head lettuce should be set a foot apart in rows which are separated by 15 to 18 inches. Early cabbage and other crops of the same family need 18 to 24 inches between each plant and the rows should be 30 to 35 inches apart. All of these plants should be set a little deeper in the hole than they were when grown as seedlings in the greenhouse or hotbed.

Commercial fertilizer should not be allowed to come in contact with the roots of plants. One level teaspoonful of fertilizer dropped into the hole where the plant is to be set, provided that the fertilizer is well mixed with the soil, will give plants a quick start, if used in addition to the regular amount broadcast.

The home gardener's taking a chance, warns Dr. Jones, if he plants corn, summer squash or bush beans at this time. These plants are in the tender category and are very susceptible to an opportunity to see turkeys, geese and guinea hens.

The next meeting of the club will be April 29.

'CLEAN UP' PROGRAM FIRST STEP IN BATTLING BORER

All corn refuse and other plant debris should be cleaned up by the latter part of April as the first step in the battle with the European corn borer, is the advice of Neely Turner, entomologist at the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station gives Connecticut farmers.

Corn borer larvae pass the winter in this refuse, and emerge in the spring, ready to begin their annual attack on field and sweet corn. Corn stalks, corn cobs and stubble should be plowed under, and weeds and dahlias and other flowering plants that are hosts for the pest should be burned or otherwise destroyed. Better still, put them in the compost heap and cover deeply with soil.

However, Mr. Turner emphasizes that this is just the first step. An all-around balanced program rather than attempts at eradication by one method gets best results.

Planting varieties which mature a time when the corn borer infestation is at its lowest and making use of fertilizers that will bring the corn to maturity at the earliest date are an important part of the program. In Connecticut, corn planted during the latter part of

May will avoid the first generation of corn borers, which makes its appearance in June. Selecting varieties that will form ears before August and September will prevent serious damage from the onslaught of the second generation of the pest during those months.

For field corn which will resist breakage by the corn borer to a large degree, the Connecticut Station suggests the following varieties: Ohio 68, Ohio 112 and Illinois 572 for late grain and early grain, and Ohio 705 and Iowa 4959 for early grain.

Insecticides are particularly useful for high-priced sweet corn but the field corn grower will find that the return from his crop seldom justifies the expense, time and labor involved in this method.

Speaking of the possibility of a serious corn borer infestation during the coming season, Mr. Turner states that thus far the weather has been ideal for the pest. May weathering conditions will tell the story, however. If the month is warm, with frequent showers and calm, mild nights, Connecticut growers can be pretty certain that they'll have a severe attack of the corn borer in their fields this summer.

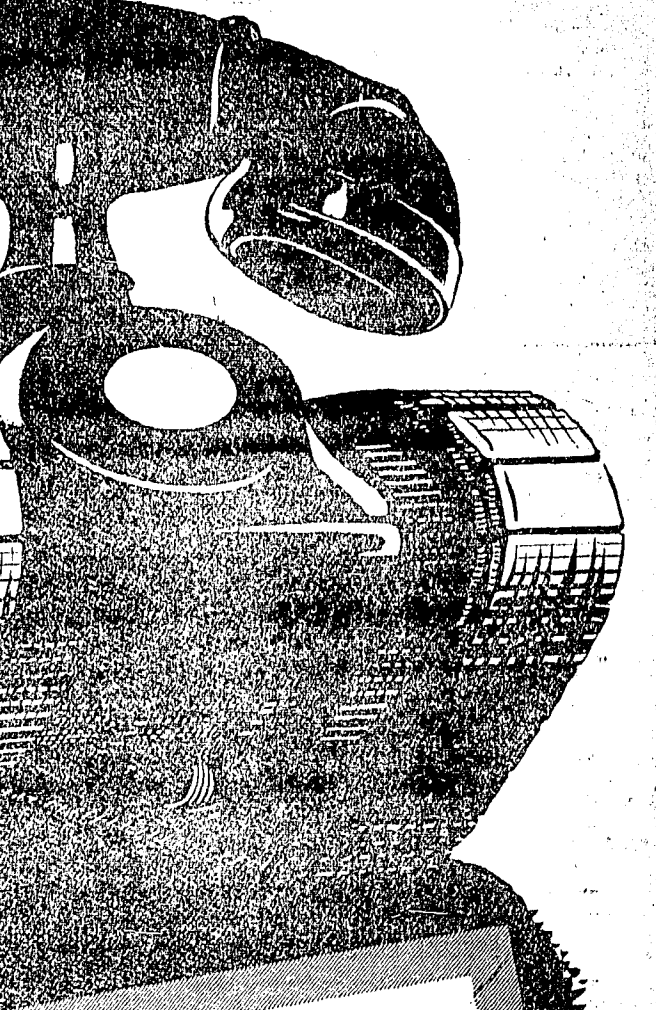

Jamaican Farm Laborers Will Help Farmers

The first contingent of Jamaican farm laborers arrived in Connecticut recently, according to Mr. Roy E. Norcross, New Haven County Agricultural Agent. The first shipment of workers arrived from Florida, where they were employed on vegetable and citrus fruit farms during the winter. The second shipment of Jamaicans will arrive about May 1, directly from Jamaica to be followed by a third contingent before the middle of May.

Three is a specialist company, the H. C. Rowe Company, Mansfield and Sons Company, and the Seacoast Oyster Company are the first farmers to apply for these workers in New Haven County. Mr. Harold C. Smith of the Farm Bureau Labor Department has been designated to act as liaison between the Jamaican workers, but in order to retain their regular employments, as farm workers have been specifically exempted from Selective Service by the Tydings Amendment. It was determined that oyster growers do actually engage in farming by growing seed, planting and cultivating the oyster beds.

In order to have Jamaicans assigned to the farms, farmers must place a definite order with the Farm Bureau Labor Department for the number of workers they want, on or before May 15. Mr. Smith stated that one hundred Jamaicans have been reserved especially during the haying season for dairy farmers from June 12 to July 10. However, the Jamaicans must live in camps established by the State Farm Labor Department and the nearest one to the New Haven area is located at Fortland. Farmers must transport these workers from the camp to the job and return to the camp daily.

Wages for these imported workers have not yet been established, but will be shortly when a Wage Board made up of farmers meets to determine the going wage in the area where these Jamaicans will be used. At the present the few Jamaicans who remained during the winter on Connecticut farms are receiving 55 cents per hour. Dairymen using these Jamaicans

Youth Problems Effect Country

"Next to winning the war, the most important problem confronting the American people right now is the battle against juvenile delinquency," declared Major John L. Griffith, Commissioner of Athletics, Western Interscholastic Conference in a statement opening the 24th annual observation of National Boys and Girls Week. "The problem affects every citizen," continued Griffith, who is chairman of the National Boys and Girls Week Committee. "There is no community entirely free from this menace. While older youth are giving their lives on the fighting fronts for the preservation of democracy, citizens at home must do their part to insure the future of America by doing everything possible to protect and facilitate the normal development of boys and girls, despite the distractions of everyday life caused by the war."

The observance of National Boys and Girls Week, is designed to focus attention on the problems, interests, and recreations of youth, and on the youth-serving organizations that strive for the development of moral character and good citizenship in growing boys and girls. Stressing the theme, "Youth Power for Days Ahead," Boys and Girls Week point to the part to be taken by the youth of today in postwar plans, when, as the citizen of tomorrow, they will be entrusted with the development and carrying out of plans for a greater nation and a better world.

Activities of the Week emphasize many important phases in the development of boys and girls, such as citizenship training, education, recreation, vocational training, home life, health and safety, and membership in boys' and girls' organizations.

Sponsored by hundreds of communities, civic clubs, youth-serving organizations, parks and playgrounds all over the United States, the 1944 celebration promises to be one of the largest and most successful ever held. Beginning April 20 and continuing through May 6, millions of boys and girls will take part in the celebration through parades and pageants, church services, exhibits, contests and demonstrations, radio broadcasts, and school assemblies.

of young people can often find ways of improving and expanding this program. They know who gets sick, who has no place to play, who stays out too late, and whose children are not properly cared for. By studying and analyzing health conditions and determining which plans to initiate, youth groups can aid another achievement to their list, which already includes successful bond-selling and scrap-collecting campaigns.

Individual application of the rules of health is also important to young people continued Dr. Clifford. Present demands on their time and energy are heavy and the demands of the future will require a strong body and a courageous spirit. Young persons going to school and working on a job besides must be particularly careful to make sure that the daily schedule is not too heavy and that they are physically able to do the kind of work they are undertaking. Medical examination is a "must" for every young person before taking a new job.

Her long train added to the beauty of her gown. Her veil fell from a tiara of orange blossoms and was fashioned with a shorter face veil. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and sweetpeas. Little clusters of stephanotis and fern were suspended by white satin ribbons.

Miss Angellina Mary Spezzano was her sister's maid-of-honor. She wore a dress of watered rose faille, fashioned with v-neckline gathered bodice, and three-quarter puffed sleeves. Her bouquet was of mixed spring flowers. She also wore a veil from a tiara of rose colored veiling and velvet flowers. Michael Adinolfi served as his brother's best man.

A wedding dinner for members of the two families was served at the Oakdale in Wallingford, and reception for friends followed at the home of the bride. YOUTH CAN HELP SOLVE COMMUNITY HEALTH PROBLEMS

Objectives of the 1944 May Day Child Health Day program were discussed by Martha L. Clifford, M. D., Director of the Bureau of Child Hygiene in the April issue of the bulletin published by the Connecticut State Department of Health.

This year's program calls attention to the health needs of children and young people. It suggests that groups of young people find ways of promoting their own health and that of their communities. Both the Governor's May Day Statement and the President's May Day Proclamation stress the importance of health to children, to youth, and to the community.
