A WEEKLY THOUGHT

"The man who does things makes many mistakes, but he never makes the biggest mistake of all—doing nothing."—Ben Franklin.

THE BUSINESS ASSOCIATION

With the annual luncheon meeting, on Monday of the coming week, of the East Haven Business & Professional Men's Association, the organization is endeavoring to make a come-back with the election of officers.

Such an organization should be of great interest and prove to be much more valuable to the business men here than it has in the past. An organization of this ilk should be able to exercise great power in a small community with the co-operation of the merchants.

The club should sponsor sales, dollar days, and even go as far as to have an East Haven Day. Such a day as this, would be a day on which all the merchants would display bargains, which may be displayed in any manner at all. If the town has a local newspaper, the merchants could advertise their bargains through this medium, thus reaching every house in the town. This day may fall on a day during the week, that would be convenient for the merchants, falling from two to four times a year, thus giving the people something worth-while to leave their homes for.

And so, all business men in town are urged to attend the business meeting and send the two-year old club off to a new start.

"LAST FLIGHT" by Amelia Earhart
Informal, gay, filled with the spirit of high adventure, this is Amelia Earhart's own story of her great flight, nearly around the world, which ended in tragic disappearance somewhere in mid-Pacific.

Almost by presentiment, it would seem, as she completed each stage of her journey she sent back not only her dispatches and personal letters, but her diaries—three penciled books of them—her charts, and the running log which she kept in the cockpit. As each bit falls into place, the narrative is seen to tell the whole story of her flight. With human incident, modesty, and humor, these pages do "convey some measure of the pervading charm and magic character of Amelia Earhart, whose explorings were as much of the mind and the spirit as they were of the air."

The text has been arranged by Amelia Earhart's husband, George Palmer Putnam, and is illustrated with a map, linecuts of documents, and many photographs.

THE PEARL OF THE EAST

by Arthur L. Griffiths, M.A., Yale

I mentioned, in the articles previous to the ones dealing with the jokes of the 24th Infantry, the oddity of conditions in the Philippines as viewed by American eyes. It is not possible to mention more than one or two such instances here.

It was very noticeable that Americans were larger than Philippine horses. But the horses of those islands are not native and they more properly are ponies rather than horses—Andalusian ponies. They are the one animal of the Philippines with real stamina. Their endurance was almost unbelievable.

Another queer object, or objects, were the carromatas and quillies in Manila. Those were pony-drawn "taxi-cabs." They were so small that the easiest way to ride in them was to have your head protruding from one window and your feet from the opposite.

I have also seen two springs of water not a foot apart where one yielded comparatively cool water and the other boiling hot. Furthermore, in the dry season of six months, not a single drop of rain fell. In the wet season of the other half of the year, not a day passed without rain. And when it rained—it meant it, as before mentioned.

The Hat-Box

Unique Wool Sets
This is the season for wool cap and scarf sets. There are many, many cuts and color effects, but there are a few sets which are very different.

One set is a snow-white wool in tricorne cut with one of the three points pulled to project a little over the right eye. Two four-inch braided strings, start at the center-top, and at the end of each string is a natural-sized wool snowball.

These snow-balls hang gracefully off the right side-back of the cap, with one snow-ball hanging a trifle lower than the other.

The scarf is ascot effect with a snow-ball on one end which is worn thrown over the shoulder.

SUPERVISING SMALL HOME CONSTRUCTION

As soon as the plaster is thoroughly dry, the inspector should allow the inside trim to be applied. If there is any doubt as to possibility of the presence of dampness, the inspector should insist that the back of all wood trim be painted before applying, otherwise the dampness (if present) will cause the trim to curl and joints to open more than they would normally from natural shrinkage.

Even if dampness is not present, it is a wise owner that insists that the back of all wood trim be painted. Trim is selected to harmonize and blend in with the proposed decorative schedule both as to kind of wood and style. If specifications have been prepared by a capable architect, these conditions will have been met and proper forethought given them; if not, the owner should look into the matter early enough so that the carpenter contractor can order the proper trim and have it ready by the time the plaster is dry.

If the scheme calls for painted trim, white pine or whitewood is preferable although of course, any wood can be painted. Often N. C. pine is used for a cheap job and when painted is as cheap a job as the name implies. Sap is liable to come through even when previously shellaced and the grain is liable to raise and show ridges. This is liable to happen if ash, oak, cypress or other coarse grained woods are used. The finer grained woods such as birch and gum wood take paint the best, next to those mentioned.
